
CONGREGATIONAL PARTICIPATION AND INVESTMENT

What's in it for me? That is a question we hear a lot in our society these days. As you learn more about the proposals for restructuring in our church, you may be asking a similar question, "What's in it for my congregation?" The answer is going to depend on what you and your congregation put into it!

Working with other congregations in your area has the potential for maximizing the ministry potential you can do. Different congregations have different strengths and when you put them together, strengths are maximized and weaknesses are minimized. If one congregation contributes keen workers, another congregation has some funds, another congregation has skills for outreach—why you might have a winning combination to make a real difference in your community!

This challenges us all to think outside of our congregational "silos" and contribute to the whole—"better together"! Sounds like something Jesus would ask us to do, doesn't it?

What's in it for you and for your congregation is the chance to work with others and make a difference in your community. Sounds like a church that can truly be In Mission for Others!

For further information on the ELCIC's structural renewal process,
visit elcic.ca/structural-renewal.

CONGREGATIONAL PARTICIPATION AND INVESTMENT

What's in it for me? That is a question we hear a lot in our society these days. As you learn more about the proposals for restructuring in our church, you may be asking a similar question, "What's in it for my congregation?" The answer is going to depend on what you and your congregation put into it!

Working with other congregations in your area has the potential for maximizing the ministry potential you can do. Different congregations have different strengths and when you put them together, strengths are maximized and weaknesses are minimized. If one congregation contributes keen workers, another congregation has some funds, another congregation has skills for outreach—why you might have a winning combination to make a real difference in your community!

This challenges us all to think outside of our congregational "silos" and contribute to the whole—"better together"! Sounds like something Jesus would ask us to do, doesn't it?

What's in it for you and for your congregation is the chance to work with others and make a difference in your community. Sounds like a church that can truly be In Mission for Others!

For further information on the ELCIC's structural renewal process,
visit elcic.ca/structural-renewal.